

The Society of Community Builders at Wesley Theological Seminary is a diverse group of professionals in the Washington area who meet for breakfast and discussion once a month. The programs make use of the resources of one of the world's leading institutions of theological education to shed light on issues of the day from the perspective of faith.

The new millennium has initiated an age of uncertainty – economic, emotional, political, environmental, and spiritual. In the aftermath of September 11, 2001 and in the midst of the stock market's roller coaster ride, we are left wondering what the future will hold. Where do we look for answers? How does our faith inform or challenge our world view?

The 2002-2003 series will explore issues relating to the intersection of faith and uncertainty. Members of the Wesley community will address these issues from varied perspectives and invite the audience's response. Also, as part of this year's series, we are pleased to present a special luncheon dialogue on Friday, November 8, 2002 at noon. Our featured guest for this unique event is FBI Director Robert S. Mueller III.
